

EXHIBIT 1

1 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
2 IN AND FOR THE DISTRICT OF DELAWARE
3
4) AZURITY PHARMACEUTICALS, INC.,) CIVIL ACTION
5 Plaintiff,) NO. 20-753-LPS
6 v))
7) ANNORA PHARMA PRIVATE LIMITED,)
8 Defendant.) NO. 21-196-LPS
9))
10) BIONPHARMA INC.,)
11 Intervenor.))
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25

Wilmington, Delaware
Friday, January 28, 2022
Telephonic Oral Argument

BEFORE: HONORABLE LEONARD P. STARK, Judge

Michele L. Rolfe, RPR, CRR

1 APPEARANCES:

2

3

4 MORRIS NICHOLS ARSHT & TUNNELL, LLP

BY: MEGAN E. DELLINGER, ESQ.

and

5 WENDY DEVINE, ESQ.

KRISTINA M. HANSON, ESQ.

6 Counsel for Azurity Pharmaceuticals, Inc.

7

BAYARD, P.A.

8 BY: STEPHEN B. BRAUERMAN, ESQ.,

9

CARLSON, CASPERS, VANDENBURGH & LINDQUIST, P.A.

10 BY: TODD S. WERNER, ESQ.

Counsel on behalf of Annora Pharma Private

11 Limited

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

1 serially extend the expiration of the patent coverage. That
2 is not the case here. Here Azurity has one patent family
3 Epaned, all of the patents expire together.

4 Notably, Annora failed to cite a single case
5 that finds that the interest in having a low cost generic on 6 the market outweighs the well-establish interest in 7 protecting the incentives for our patent system.

8 As the Federal Circuit has repeatedly noted,
9 including in Sanofi vs. Apotex 470 F.3d 1368, "There is a 10 significant public interest in encouraging investment in 11 drug development and protecting the exclusionary rights
12 conveyed in valid pharmaceutical patents."

13 That public interest favors maintenance of the 14 status quo and entry of an injunction until a post trial
15 decision can be rendered here. Accordingly, all the factors
16 weigh in favor of Azurity and a preliminary injunction
17 should be granted.

18 THE COURT: All right. Thank you. A few
19 questions for you, Ms. Devine.

20 One of the general themes, and you've already
21 addressed it, but I want to make sure I fully understand
22 you. One of the general themes of the defendant here seems 23 to be you all told me there would be horrible repercussions
24 for your client if I did not grant a preliminary injunction
25 to stop the launch of Bionpharma. I did not grant such a

1 preliminary injunction and your client has survived and,
2 arguably, even thrived nonetheless. I understand some of 3 the particular circumstances that happened with Bionpharma
4 and presumably those precise circumstances would not occur
5 again, but why shouldn't I conclude as a general matter your 6 client will find a way to survive and this is just, you
7 know, crying wolf a second time?

8 MS. DEVINE: Thank you, Your Honor. So there
9 are a couple of reasons why the harm was stemmed from 10 Bionpharma's launch. One being that Bionpharma had not 11 qualified an additional supplier and lost its supplier, so
12 the ongoing harm when we were before Your Honor in November 13 ceased, to a certain extent, shortly thereafter because 14 CoreRx chose to stop supplying Bionpharma; so that was an 15 event that happened that did extend the harm.

16 Azurity did suffer irreparable harm as a result
17 of Bionpharma's activities. And as Mr. Patel details, that 18 harm is ongoing and still impacting the company. That it
19 was stemmed through factual developments post our 20 preliminary injunction is what affected things.

21 So I would doubt -- it's an unusual circumstance
22 of Bionpharma, I would doubt that we would have the same
23 situation with Annora that they would somehow lose their 24 supply. But, you know -- so we doubt that we would be able 25 to stem it in that same way.

1 and convincing evidence that these claims are invalid. I'm 2 not.

3 All I am holding is that there's at least 4 persuasive evidence of invalidity on the grounds that I have 5 identified. And any language I may have used that seems 6 broader than that is unnecessary. I do think that these may 7 well be very strong defenses, but I don't have to make a
8 conclusion on that, and I'm not making a conclusion on that.

9 Turning back, just briefly, to enablement.
10 There's always an opinion from the defendant's expert that 11 at least some number of inoperable embodiments are captured
12 in the broad claims of the '868 patent and that, for this 13 reason as well, undue experimentation would be necessary in 14 order for the person of skill in the art to understand the 15 full scope of what is actually enabled and claimed.

16 This is additional persuasive evidence that is 17 sufficient to support my finding that the plaintiff has not
18 met its burden to show a likelihood of success on the merits
19 with respect to the claims of the '868 patents on which the 20 motion is based.

21 So for all of those reasons, Azurity has failed
22 to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits.

23 Let me turn, more briefly, to irreparable harm.
24 In my view, Azurity has also failed to show irreparable
25 harm, if -- as I am doing, I'm denying its motion for

1 preliminary injunction.

2 Azurity identifies a number of types of harms
3 that might under other circumstances support a finding of 4 irreparable harm. The parties here are direct competitors.
5 This is a small -- or Azurity is a small specialty drug
6 manufacturer. And Epaned, the product at issue in this 7 litigation, is its flagship product and the defendant -- and 8 the product is likely going to be substituted for Epaned.

9 As of today, there's market exclusivity. We 10 heard, you know, late-breaking information that perhaps that 11 will change, independent of my decision, as a result of the 12 New York litigation between Bionpharma and CoreRx, its 13 supplier. But as of today, it is true that Epaned is the 14 only product in a ready-to-use liquid enalapril market.

15 The plaintiff has evidence that it will be 16 harmed from the introduction into the market of a lower 17 priced generic competitor. Annora's generic is obviously 18 unauthorized and would, almost certainly, if introduced 19 exert a downward pressure on the price of Epaned. And 20 Azurity has said that it intends to launch its own
21 authorized generic, which will also exert downward pressure.

22 I should be clear, Azurity has said if this 23 motion is denied and if Annora does in fact intend to 24 launch, then Azurity intends to launch its authorized 25 generic. And even if ultimately further litigation were to

1 remove Annora's competitors product from the market, it
2 would be difficult, I recognize, for the Epaned market price
3 to go back to the higher price it's currently at. And 4 that's true whether or not Azurity launches its authorized
5 generic, but certainly all the more true, that is all the 6 more difficult, if Azurity launches its authorized generic.

7 Azurity argues that it's going to have to scale
8 back its education efforts related to its products and lose 9 sales of its other products if it can't get its foot in the 10 door as easily with its Epaned product. And also talks
11 of -- and there's evidence for all those things, I
12 recognize, loss of research and development opportunities, 13 the possibility of employee layoffs, potential harm to the 14 plaintiff's reputation and, perhaps, loss of access to 15 funding.

16 All these things there's support for in the 17 record, they all, I think, are harm, but the plaintiff has 18 failed to persuade me on this record that any of those,
19 individually or in combination, under the circumstances here
20 constitute harm that would be irreparable.

21 One reason for Azurity's failure is the evidence
22 with respect to what occurred in connection with 23 Bionpharma's launch of its generic version of Epaned. The 24 record appears to show that Azurity was not irreparably
25 harmed by that launch and has fully recovered from it. That

1 is despite me, as the presiding judge in the Bionpharma
2 case, having heard that essentially all the harms forecast
3 now in this case, with respect to the pending motion here,
4 would occur and would be irreparable were I to deny the 5 preliminary injunction to stop Bionpharma's launch. I then
6 denied that motion, Bionpharma launched and here we are 7 months later, and I do not believe that Azurity has been 8 irreparably harmed.

9 Now, two things: One, the record of all of that 10 is fair for me to consider, much of it is in the record in 11 this case. But beyond that, no one has argued I can't 12 consider the Bionpharma situation. And I could take 13 judicial notice of it as well.

14 But, second, I do want to emphasize, I recognize 15 the circumstances are quite different here than in 16 Bionpharma. I presume that Annora does not have the same
17 supplier that Bionpharma did. And I'm sure it's unlikely 18 that the parent or holder of some amount of equity of 19 Azurity is going to go out and acquire or acquire some 20 equity in whoever Annora retains as its supplier; and that 21 fact pattern is unlikely to be repeated here.

22 But the important point to me is I don't know
23 what will happen in the absence of granting the requested
24 preliminary injunction, but I have real world experience
25 with Azurity, real world experience with Azurity that it can

1 survive the launch of a generic, even when it told me that 2 it would be irreparably harmed. At bottom, and most
3 pertinent, Azurity just simply has not demonstrated that 4 the harms it forecasts will befall it from a denial of its 5 motion today will occur and will be irreparable.

6 In reaching that conclusion, I would also add
7 that any alleged harms are likely quantifiable and 8 monetarily compensable. This appears to have been true of 9 the impact on the market from Bionpharma's launch of its 10 unauthorized generic.

11 For example, Azurity's CEO and expert used data
12 repositories to show the impact the Bionpharma generic had 13 on Epaned's market share and price. And I have no reason to 14 think that the same type of exercise cannot be undertaken
15 after Annora's launch, if it turns out that Annora
16 ultimately does not prevail on the merits and then is liable
17 for damages to Azurity; I believe we will be able to 18 calculate those damages with reasonable certainty.

19 The speculated loss of R&D opportunities,
20 reduced sales of other products, layoffs and the other harms
21 I listed before, in the context of this case I think Azurity
22 can be compensated for these harms with a money judgment, 23 probably a large money judgment. And, again, these are the 24 same types of harms that were predicted to be both 25 unavoidable and irreparable were Bionpharma to launch, but

1 that turned out not to be a correct prediction.

2 I'll add if it -- I have no reason to doubt that
3 what I was told happened in the New York litigation this 4 morning by counsel. It did in fact happen. If all of that 5 means it's more likely that the status quo soon is going to 6 be that there is a Bionpharma generic drug in this
7 marketplace, that makes the plaintiff's failing to show
8 irreparable harm for my denial of today's motion all the 9 more glaring, but my decision is not based on that.

10 I imagine plaintiff is correct that there will 11 be more litigation in that case, the New York case. And so
12 I think that my decision is fully warranted, even on the 13 assumption that Bionpharma won't be back in the market soon.
14 But if Bionpharma will in fact be on the market soon, then
15 it's even more difficult for the plaintiff to show
16 irreparable harm from the introduction of a second 17 unauthorized generic competitor than it would be to show for 18 just one. And, so, that would only strengthen the basis of 19 my decision.

20 Bottom line is Azurity has not met its burden to 21 show that it will suffer irreparable harm in the absence of 22 granting extraordinary relief of a preliminary injunction.

23 I'm not addressing balance of harms or the 24 public interest, it's not necessary. The plaintiff has 25 failed to met its burden on the first two required elements